To Whom It May Concern

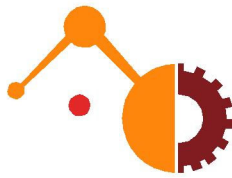

Dear Sir/Madam

TESTIMONIAL ON RATE-1-COACHING

It gives me great pleasure to attest about my experiences of the training provided by Rate-1-Coaching. My experience of their training was in the first quarter of 2010 when they spent a full day with me and all my staff at the Moses Kotane Institute. As a new entity, we were experiencing problems associated with lack of understanding of the basics about cooperation in the work place. The staff of the Moses Kotane Institute is comprised of highly qualified persons in different academic areas, finance and human resource management. Despite our qualifications, we were lacking one key element of success, the right attitude.

After spending about seven hours with Rate-1-Coaching, most of my staff came to me and said they felt like they have had something that was blocking their common vision removed from their minds. They could clearly identify why and how to work together as a team.

Later, I invited Mr Mark Linley, the leader of Rate-1-Coaching, to a launch of our programme for the development of skills for parliamentarians and senior government officials in KwaZulu-Natal. At that function, Mr Linley shared the platform with politicians and church leaders. It was amazing how his message covered all aspects of life, and was easily embraced by the audience, without labelling it as a political speech or a religious message. It simply focussed on the reality of life and how, it is easy to address problems if one has the right mindset.

The Moses Kotane Institute is currently considering a permanent relationship with Rate-1-Coaching, to use their services to train our learners, who include high school children, teachers, unemployed youth and government employees. There is no question that their contribution would provide a rare skill, which is not generally taught at education institutions – the attitude. The accreditation of Rate-1-Coaching is necessary for South Africans to have access to their services with confidence that their knowledge will be recognised in the workplace.

I am willing to answer any questions about my views regarding Rate-1-Coaching, if that should be a requirement in future.

Yours faithfully,
